Mrs. Wollcot was in the dining-room at the time, and hearing her daughter's screams she ran into the hailway just in time to see the man come down the stairs.

Mrs. Wollcot is a courageous woman, and when she saw the jewel-box in the thief's hands she grabbed the robber about the body and screamed at the top of her voice.

The thief pitched the diamonds in the basement, pulled a diamond pin from his trousers pocket, and threw that away, and then rid himself of a lot of hand-series and the process of the property and the property in the process of the support himself in as much elegance as a property with the property and the property in the property in

All this time, which ocupied but a few seconds, Mrs. Wollcot hung on for dear life, and kept up her screaming, which was added to by her daughter. Suddenly the thief made a desperate effort and broke away. Opening the front door, he ran towards Seventh avenue.

Mrs. Wollcot, though dressed only in a loose morning wrapper, pluckily followed, crying, "Stop, thief!"

There is a saloon on the corner of Seventh avenue and Thirtieth street, and into the side door the man plunged, followed by his pursuer.

There were several loungers in the place, and, seeing the panting thief hesitate as if to turn at bay, and then the sudden appearance of Mrs. Wollcot, they jumped to their feet and grabbed the sile need when Commander Dickins was recalled to Washington.

Among the Spanish friends of the Duke the opinion prevails that he considers he was taken to the Brunswick instead of the Waldorf in order to save expense.

He denied that he was the man who had been in Miss Wollcot's room when first taken to the station-house, but when one of Miss Wollcot's handkerchiefs was found in his pocket he wilted, and with a sickly smile admitted he was caught.

Policeman Kelly brought his prisoner to the Jefferson Market Police Court this morning, and had him remanded. Miss Wollcot is nearly prostrated by the excitement she has gone through.

MARION BOOTH WANTS ALIMONY Alleges that Byron Douglas Has

Not Obeyed a Court Order. Actor Byron Douglas has been served th papers in an application made by known to the stage as Marion Booth, tion brought by the wife in 1892, on the ground of non-payment of alimony.

The papers were served it was learned to-day during the funeral services of Actor Edwin Booth at the "Little Church Around the Corner," in West Twenty-ninth street, on June 9.

The papers show that Miss Booth, who is a niece of the late Edwin Booth, was married to Douglas June 30, 1888, by a Justice of the Peace in Jersey City, A son, Edwin Booth Douglas, survives as a result of the marriage. The couple never lived happily, so the survives as a result of the marriage. The couple never lived happily, so the papers allege, and in 1892 Douglas began a suit for divorce from his wife. Mrs. Douglas brought a counter suit and asked for $40 a week alimony. Judge Freedman ordered $25 a week alimony. The wife now alleges that she has received but a small portion of the money due her. The husband has paid no attention to the napers served on no attention to the papers served on him on June 9, and Mrs. Douglas's atterneys say they have procured commitment papers upon which to arrest the actor when he returns from Hoston, where he is now believed to be.

> A season of melodrama was begun at the Fourteenth Street Theatre last night, the initial play being William Haworth's sensational episode "A Flag of Truce," which is not new to this city. The audience seemed to like it, and the big scene in which steam drills are seen in operation, was loudly applauded. The steam drill, however, is not quite everything in this melodrama. The cast included Henry Bergman, a very good actor; the author himself, May Thompson, Arna Belmont and others.

COLUMBUS THEATRE. "Tangled Up," a farce-comedy that does not hele its name, was presented at the Columbus Theatre, Harlem, last night, with Will S. Rising and Louis de Lange in the leading roles. Mr. Rising is an artist, and his voice is still exceedingly good. His work gave complete satisfaction. In the company were Alexander Clark, Charles Drew, C. F. Wilbur, Hans F. Robert, Effic Dar ting, Jennie Allaire, Nellie Hamblin and Bessie Challenger.

The always tuneful "Lucia di Lammermoor" was sung by the Hinrichs grand opera company at the Grand Opera-House last night. The house was well filled, as it richly deserved to be, for this organization is a very creditable one, and it has given a series of praise-worthy performances. 'Lucia' was very well sung, and neatly put upon the stage. The chorus and orchestra did good work. The event of 'he week will be the production of "I Pagliacet" Thursday night.

River at New London just now, the and Cornell practically monopolizing the bridge in their practice work for the an-pretty stretch of water above the big bridge in their practice work for the annual races the latter part of this month. Of course, the greatest interest is centred in the 'warsity race between Yale and Harvard, which will be rowed on June 30. Each crew is watching the other closely, and any faults that may be detected are turned to the advantage of the crew on the lookout.

"Bob" Cook, the famous Yale coach, is on the spot, and his presence always acts as a stimulant on the New Havenites. Harvard's menton is ex-Capt. Perkins, and he does not lag for an instant in his coaching of the Crimsons. Every day now will see the hardest kind of licks put in by the different crews, and the work mapped out will put the men to the greatest physical test. It is too early to draw an accurate line on either Harvard or Yale, as neither is rowing with the uniformity so desirable in rowing crews. As usual, Coach Cook doesn't bespeak confidence in the Yale crew, but this is so characteristic of him that it hardly counts for much. The Columbia Freshmen put in a hard day yesterday, covering eighteen miles before they turned in for rest. Mr. Reeves has been accepted as referee of the Yale-Harvard Varsity race, in which capacity he officiated last year. The new Columbian A. C., of Chicago opened last night at Roby, Ind., and two fights were held, a four-round go between Joe Goddard, of Australia, and Willis Kennedy, of St. Louis, and a finish fight between Buffalo Costello and Billy Woods, of Denver. An impression was gained that Gov. Matthew Billy Woods, of Denver. An impression was gained that Gov. Matthews would prevent the entertainment, but it seems that the Lezislature passed a statute permitting boxing exhibitions, and the Governor signed the bill without actually looking into it. So there ought to be a feast of fighting at Roby for some time to come. Goddard had no difficulty in putting Kennedy in a helpless condition in the second round. He secured the $1,200 purse. Woods and Costello competed for $2,500. They fought fifty-seven rounds, when the referee called it a draw.

In the forty-seventh round the referee said if it wasn't decided in tenmore rounds he would call it no contest, and give the purse to a charitable institution. Costello had broken his hands during the fight, and round after round was fought with not a blow exchanged. The spectators yearled of the saffair, and shouted continually at the boxers to do some work. Finally, in the fifty-seventh round the referee decided it a draw, because Costello had fought with maimed hands. The purse was divided.

fought with malmed hands. The purse was divided.

Mike Leonard, the boxer who is to meet George Reynolds at Coney Island on June 22, had an experience Sunday at the island, and he came out with flying colors. With his trainer, Doc Hewett, he started along Surf avenue and came across a trio of hilarious excursionists. One of them jostled Mike and astonished the bover by striking him a sharp blow in the face. In a moment the prize-fighter's terrible fist was clinched and he was about to deal out summary punishment when he suddenly relented. "No," he suid to "Doc," "I won't hit a man who has not an even chance with me. I may be a dude, as some of the boys say, but I will never be a well-dressed rowdy." The onlookers who knew Mike heartily cheered him as he blushingly meandered down towards the beach.

The bout, by the way, between Leon-Ricyclists Zimmerman and Sanger will sail for America from Queenstown tomorrow. The former is disgusted with the way bicycle races are managed in England, and says he will never compete on Queen Victoria's little island again. He says he was made the scapegoat in a quarrel between the Union and the Club which organized Saturday's racing. Sanger says that the climate of England is not just to his fancy.
